IN & OUTDOOR LIFE

The Valencian company Expormim will present the latest news from their Rattan series, more specifically the new items Fontal, Coffee Tables and Nautica.

The Fontal armchair, a new concept combining handicraft and design

The latest creation from the designer Oscar Tusquets Blanca for the company: the black Fontal armchair from the Rattan 2012 series. This elegant piece is handmade. It is a one-of-a-kind product that is characterised by harmony and nature. The rigorous designer work makes it a base for a new 'way of life' that combines technology with handicraft, science and art.

Coffee tables Trio, Trim and Tryp

This is a collection of centre tables that are organic: Trio, Trim and Tryp, each of them designed by Studio Expormim to fulfil diverse necessities.

With Trio and Trip, the essence of the raw material is enhanced by using heavy tops made of solid oak, while the Tryp tables are formed by steel bands that come together in a round, subtly perforated top. The Tryp design makes it an original piece, unique and elegant in every home.

Nautica, a unique swing

Nautica belongs to the Expormim collection of furniture made of rattan. The company wants to update and bring to life this particular material, used since the beginning, by collaborating with prestigious designers. Nautica, designed by Mut Design, is a hanging seat that honours one of the first pieces of furniture created by the company in the 70s.

A swing that recovers and redefines the use of rattan that is enhanced by the subtle play of shadows that results from its movements as it surrenders to motion, reminding us of the play of water seen on the waves at sea.

Konstantin Grcic designs Bench B, a new master piece for the Extrusions collection produced by BD Barcelona Design

Text by Konstantin Grcic

"I've known BD since the late eighties or early nineties. I was a student of design then, and at the time Spanish design had a real Renaissance or it just seemed to have popped up on the map. I drew my intention to the country, I travelled to Spain and discovered a lot of things. Among those BD Barcelona Design, a company which had an incredible facility to mix old and new, and something quite artisanal with very industrial things.

Many years later when BD got in touch with me, it seemed so clear to me that I wanted to make some kind of reference to the history of the company that I like so much: a collection with aluminium extrusions. I proposed making just a big table, like an aeroplane wing. When you see the table in the largest dimensions, up to almost 6 meters in length, it is something that the eye with the brain doesn't understand of how it can work.

It was obvious that if you have a table you need chairs. So it became the next project, the B Chair. But instead of doing a chair in aluminium, we opted for a chair in wood with one extruded element: the technical spine of the chair. A quite invisible piece of tube. It is a wooden chair that has a classical form with a half round back. The seat is folding, which allows for horizontal stacking so it's a chair that can be quite economical in terms of the space it takes up.

After the chair we wanted to find a new territory and we conceived Bench B. We started working on the bench as a family of elements from very short, like a one-seater side chair, to a long bench of up to 6 meters. It can be for indoor or outdoor, it can have arms or not, it can be upholstered or left pure aluminium. I think we have created a kit of parts which can be turned to very different typologies or uses of this bench.

What is interesting in this bench is that it makes reference to a very famous piece of furniture: The Barcelona Chair designed by Mies van der Rohe. I think it is interesting to make this reference in design. Design is not about inventing new things all the time, design is an evolution of things."

AFRIKA, Jorge Pensi

The Afrika model stands out for its fine aesthetic character: the series is made up of a sofa of different lengths, a fixed chair and a swivel chair.

Each piece is characterised by pure lines and irregular angles, with the emphasis on the bar inserted in the frame which runs along the sides of the seat before terminating at the metal legs, which support the seat structure. The legs are finished with oven baked paint, chrome-plated or nickel-plated. The backrest and seat modules, of a natural down and fiber filling on a multi-density polyurethane foam base, are extremely comfortable and contrast with the rigidity of the straight sides.

DIAM, Samuel Accoceberry

Diam chairs are suitable for any modern surrounding that welcomes innovative design. Although concealed by the lightness of the sides and backrest and therefore not easily perceived by the eye, the breadth and depth of the seat is striking. The wooden structure is coated with polyurethane. For maximum comfort, the backrest and seat are made of multi-density foam and a natural down and fiber fill. Another innovation of note is the total lack of sharp angles.

MONROE, Lievore Altherr Molina

The Monroe sofa is aesthetic versatility and structural coherence. Its modular structure makes it possible to have either a classic horizontal sofa or a corner sofa to close a space and make it more intimate. The modules are presented in different sizes, with well-studied proportions, as indeed are the cushions. Monroe achieves a more traditional and domestic look with the option of a cover which includes a skirt to cover the legs. The multiposition reclining seatback sets this model apart. From horizontal to vertical it is designed to achieve maximum user comfort, due to a mechanism hidden in the back support cushion. Its undeniable comfort is due to the choice of quality materials.
